

workers action

As a Home Bargains worker—we know you face many challenges in your store and we offer our full support

Our campaign is fully focused on the demand that Home Bargains change its procurement policies—so that you are no longer forced to handle blood stained products

This is part of the Palestinian-led Boycott, Divestment, Sanctions (BDS) campaign—which will continue until Israel complies with universal human rights principles and International law

“I worked at Musselburgh Home Bargains for over a year. My biggest problem was the management. I was constantly given more shifts than I was supposed to work, whether I wanted them or not didn't matter. Shifts constantly got changed at the last minute without any notice. My colleague was told by management that if he went to HR they would make his life hell. Management were on a power trip and acted very inappropriately towards others. We would be scheduled to work until 9pm and then be expected to work again at 6am the next morning. Someone worked until 10pm and was also expected back at 6am. Morning shifts were stressful, I was told multiple times that I wasn't doing enough which wasn't helpful at all. Training was terrible, you were just thrown in to figure it out yourself.”
