BUILDING EFFECTIVE SOLIDARITY

Dockworker and trade union activist Erik Helgeson is coming to Scotland to share lessons from the front line of international labour solidarity.

A leading figure in the Swedish Dockworkers' Union, Erik helped organise industrial action for Palestine and became a symbol of workers standing up for principles in the face of union-busting attacks.

He will describe how his employer seized on the action, using it as a pretext for his dismissal.

Whilst the case is going through the Swedish Labour Courts an international fundraising campaign has enabled the union to employ Erik directly. This allows him to continue to carry out his elected responsibilities on behalf of the members, sending a clear message to the employer that union-busting will not succeed.

Join us for a powerful discussion on how workers can act ethically and strategically in solidarity with Palestine.

Addressing worker power, union democracy, and what Scottish trade unionists can learn from the struggles happening in workplaces across the world - and how we can take action of our own.
